To whom it may concern,

I am writing to object to the proposed building on a greenbelt site in Yeadon/Guiseley/Rawdon. The infrastructure is not in place to support families moving into the area and without a plan for schools, traffic calming measures, and road safety it seems to me that there has not been enough planning gone into the idea.

I am a mother of two young children who are already living in uncertain times regarding their education, it does not seem fair to place more uncertainty on the quality of the education they will be gaining. If hundreds more children need to have school places, surely this will impact on already stretched schools?

Also, road safety is a major issue in the surrounding area already. With more and more traffic this will only get worse.

Lastly, was there not a promise made to not develop greenbelt land, especially whilst there is brownbelt available to develop on? can you honestly say this is the case? Is there honestly no more brownbelt in Leeds?

Thank you for your consideration.
