Dear Sir

Re: Horsforth planning

I realise that writing to you is a futile effort because planners seem to turn deaf ears to ordinary people.

I have lived in Horsforth most of my life and seen it encroached upon by builders who want profit and spinetex bureaucrats who follow the latest whims of Westminster, but please do not build on the tiny remaining bits of green belt which separate us from the city, Calwoty and Rawden.

Doesn't civilisation permit some unspoilt fields, trees and countryside or has economic determinism decided human beings should be machines controlled by government feds?

Come on planners, show a little spine and say 'no' to further building.
Tues.
