Dear Sirs,

I feel I must add my voice to the chorus of protests to the threat to one of the last patches of our rapidly disappearing green belt. I beg you to think again, once the green belt has gone its gone for good. Think about our grandchildren and all the future generations. No watching the farmer ploughing his fields, or cutting his hay, not to mention the pleasure in picking their own strawberries.

Surely the small areas of green belt are worth protecting in fact that's why they were called green belt in the first place.

I urge you to change your minds before it's too late. There are plenty of brown field sites still to use which might actually improve the area not devastate it.

I haven't mentioned the traffic congestion which we have with the houses we have already. Driving on our roads is a nightmare already without any more houses springing up by the hundreds

Yours sincerely
